Change is certain. Peace is followed by disturbances . . Such recurrences should not constitute occasions for sadness but realities for awareness, so that one may be happy in the interim.

The man is disposed toward far reaching changes. Yet after his complaints have been well aired, his recommendations will be understood. He will succeed.

Science Center Dedication

The Founder's Day dedication of the two million dollar Jesse Cleveland Pearce Science Center marked completed construction for the 1960's and Mary Baldwin's progress into the 1970's. Classrooms, laboratories, research stations, a greenhouse, and an auditorium seating 260 are all incorporated in the new building.

The center is named for the late Dr. Jesse Pearce in appreciation of a gift made by his wife in the form of a life trust. The chemistry department is named for John Baker Daffin, professor emeritus; the auditorium for James Draper Francis, trustee.

Women In Industry:

NEW PERSPECTIVES FROM EDUCATION — BUSINESS — GOVERNMENT

CONFERENCE DECEMBER 8-10 MARY BALDWIN COLLEGE

Business and industry are seeking college-educated women for positions in their corporate structures. Government is insisting that they do so. Colleges and universities are asking what kind of educational experience will best prepare young women for these newly-opened positions.

Meeting at Mary Baldwin on December 8-10, some 130 senior executives from the nation's leading corporations focused on the issues and the outlook for women in industry. The conference was jointly sponsored by American Telephone and Telegraph Company, American Can Company, International Paper Company, Mary Baldwin College, and the Women's Bureau of the U.S. Department of Labor.

The goal of the three-day forum was to develop a better understanding of business by students, better career preparation of women students by college, and further utilization by business of colleges as a source of women's executive talent.

Keynote speaker, Congresswoman Margaret M. Heckler (R., Massachusetts).

YOU'VE COME A LONG WAY

Reprinted from 1934 Bluestocking

Mary Baldwin's President announced February 1 the establishment of a business orientation program, to begin with the '71 — '72 academic year, designed to develop a better understanding of business and industry by the students. It is hoped that such a program will produce graduates who are better prepared for a business career and will enable business to utilize more fully the women's liberal arts college as a source of women's executive talent.

During the first year the college will involve corporate executives as businessmen in residence through the department of economics. These executives will cooperate with members of the M.B.C. faculty and will work with students both in and outside the classroom to give new emphasis to courses already offered.

Off campus, M.B.C. will offer students the opportunity to participate in summer orientation programs and similar shorter programs in January, which will place students in companies for a first-hand familiarization with how business and industry operates.

To implement the new program, Mary Baldwin is seeking two types of action from business and industry: 1. The cooperation of experienced corporate executives in giving advice, in lending their time for actual participation in business orientation programs on campus, and in allowing M.B.C. students to observe their companies on the scene. 2. Financial assistance to allow the college to carry out the new program at the high level appropriate to its purposes.

President's Message

It is certainly a pleasure for me to have an opportunity to say a personal word to the Class of 1971 through their edition of The Bluestocking.

A yearbook means many things to many people. It becomes a record for each graduating class to look back upon as a symbol of the time spent at college. It is filled with pictures, names, achievements, and moments of great significance. More than anything, however, a yearbook becomes a representation of human endeavor during a most important and formative period in life. Beyond classes and organizations and activities; this Bluestocking is a symbol of what Mary Baldwin has meant to the Class of 1971.

This Class has seen significant change during its four years in residence at this college. In addition to major changes in administration of the institution, this class has had much to do with the development of new ideas and ways of doing things at Mary Baldwin. It has been a genuine privilege for me to be associated with this class over the past two years. I wish everyone well in whatever lies beyond these years spent at Mary Baldwin College.

Professor of Political Science

More and more I feel compelled to assess the role of the individual and the community. As a political scientist, I once learned in a political theory course that "wherever I go, in my mind I meet Plato coming back." Plato was my hero when I was a student, and I agreed that he had been wherever anyone else later tried to go — intellectually.

Now I realize that the Greeks (Plato included) really had something when they coined the phrase "polity" — the community that was not only a political, but social, economic, spiritual and cultural grouping as well. I guess all of us, at Mary Baldwin and in many other college and university communities throughout the world, are grappling with the problem of preserving our individuality and our community. Hobbes stated the extreme of individualism — "Life in the state of nature is nasty, brutish and short." Plato says through Socrates, "A city, I take it, comes into being because each of us is not self-sufficient but needs many things." Whenever I am pressed to weigh the importance of the individual and the group, I seek refuge in Plato's explanation as to why a "city" (polity — community to us) comes into being. Each of us needs many things — and in reading further in the Republic we know "things" are what people can live by and do, and ultimately I learned they, the people themselves (we ourselves) are the "things" of which Plato speaks.

Elke Frank

Planning ahead implies a thorough study of the past. That study gives us every reason for assuming our future is promising indeed. We have established our goals and a plan of action; all that remains is success.

Craven E. Williams
Vice-President

Although I frequently see a resemblance between a present student and one some-time gone, it's never more than a surface resemblance; no two are ever alike. Recurring problems or situations are never the same either — the involvement of new personalities makes new reactions and hence new situations and new problems. It's never dull in my area, never routine. Occasionally I long for a "routine" day to catch up with myself, but actually I thrive on variety and a feeling of something always different. I'm sure more than one such day — at least close together — would bore me stiff.
